MIAMI

The lecture at the Baptist church last Saturday evening was very much enjoyed by the large crowd that heard it. The theme, "Bursting the Boozie" was emphatically discussed by the speaker.

Little George Royer who is ill at his uncle, Adolph Royer is improving some and his fever is leaving him and he is able to sit up a short while.

The remains of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forest McDaniel was laid to rest in the Baptist cemetery last Thursday morning.

Miss Flossie Bishop teacher of the Pleasant Grove school taught last Saturday and had Monday as a day off so that she might be in Miami to enjoy the wonders of Wonderland, the floating opera boat which is making its last trip down stream this season.

A Marshall marble firm will shortly erect to the memory of the late Jno. Roe, at his grave in the Baptist cemetery in Miami a very beautiful monument.

Many lovers of football playing were very much disappointed when the boat Wonderland arrived and the members of the opera declined to play against Miami as Miami had anticipated. The day was rainy and damp and the Wonderland team no doubt did not feel enthused enough as to play.

Last Thursday, right after noon, Mrs. John Jennings of Miami, saw smoke and flames issuing from a barn on her premises and as none of her folks were at home she telephoned to different neighbors and failed to get any one to come to help extinguish the fire until it was too late to save anything. No stock was in the barn but Mrs. Jennings new buggy and harness and other valuable articles and a lot of hay were destroyed. Two hundred dollars on the building and one hundred on the articles therein doesn't near cover the loss. The cause of the fire is unknown. This is the 2nd loss by fire Mr. and Mrs. Jennings have suffered in the last few months.

Aunt Aggie Langford, col., aged about 83 years died from the weakness of old age at her home in "Coon Hollow". Her aged husband survives her.

Mrs. Hamners fine buggy horse got badly kicked not long since and is now suffering from quite an aggravating sore on one of its hind limbs.

In the good honest olden times the knee pant boy and the little girl with braided hair were sent to school to learn their lessons and then innocently and quickly returned home and soon after supper were snugly tucked away by loving mothers in their trundle beds. Quite different now, the knee pant boy is acting the part of a beau and eagerly hastens to his little lady's side—who with a crimson cheek that matches the saucy coquettish bow on her hair is doing her part of the courting. Love letters of a sickening nature are exchanged and torrents of "puppy love" are scratched down. At night when parents think their little boys are at church, some can be seen strutting along the streets smoking cigarettes. We have a small boy and are trying hard to keep our eyes on him as he too is apt to follow the footsteps of the boys of his age.

Little Stories for Women About Clothes—No. 1

The Woman's Tailor Who Stopped Guessing

ONE day a certain firm of women's tailors in Cleveland determined that they would take all the guesswork out of clothes buying and MAKE WOMEN SAFE.

"Women who buy clothes ought to be protected against uncertainties and we are going to do it," they said.

"Our styles are going to be authentic, exclusive and irresistible.

"We will use nothing but fabrics of pure wool, free of even a thread of cotton; cloth that will wear for years.

"We will use the best, soft tailoring that the tailoring art knows. A woman will be able to sleep in one of our garments if she wants to, and shake out every crease and wrinkle when she wakes up.

"We will put a label in every one of our garments so that they can be identified in any store, and we will guarantee that every garment bearing that label will give satisfactory wear for two full seasons."

"HAT'S fine, but how are you going to do it?" asked the trade.

"We'll show you," said this concern.

And they did. How they did it—how they got the precious, carefully-guarded Paris style-information in time—how their styles became not merely the admiration but the standard of the American women's clothing trade—how their shop grew to be the model plant of the whole world—all this we will tell in subsequent stories. This is enough for today, except to say—

This store has the exclusive selling agency for this city of the garments made under the above policy. The styles are numerous, exclusive and exquisite; the values easily the best to be had by anyone who appreciates the value of CONTINUED good looks at moderate cost. The maker's name is The H. Black Co., the label on their coats, suits and shirts reads "WOOLTEX."

For examples of the superb garments and distinctive styles made possible at moderate prices by the Wooltex policy, see these, among many others, tomorrow:
